

WILDLIFE WEDNESDAYS WITH FOCRG

Carion Crow

This is one of the cleverest and most adaptable birds found around the recs and you will often see them in the grounds taking advantage of any food sources available including the bins.

Jay

The most colourful member of the crow family is the Jay. We have breeding Jays in the woods and though it is shy you may see them along the edges of the recs never far from the cover of the trees. They are easy to spot when on the move as they have a white rump and lovely blue flash on their wing. Though they have a penchant for acorns, seeds, and insects, they won't say no to a tasty nestling or small mammal if the chance arises.

Tawny Owl

Anyone around the Recs in the evening has likely heard the distinctive call of an owl or two. If you were wondering who our resident nocturnal friends are - they are Tawny Owls. They are roughly the size of a large pigeon, with reddish brown feathers. Their favourite night-time snacks include small mammals, birds, frogs, insects, and worms.
